In its current issue the Connecticut Farmer devotes some attention to the subject of farm bureaus. It says that while this is new in Connecticut, it is not new in other parts of the country and several states have already seen the advantage of the closer relation-ship which it cultivates between the merchants and the farmers. It points out that the city merchant has often times failed to realize the mutual re lationship which ought to exist with the farmer, and the farmer has al-lowed himself to drift into the habit of outside buying. The farmer should of outside buying. The farmer should aim to produce such an inviting line of produce that the merchant would have no desire to buy elsewhere than from him and the merchant should realize that the trade relations should be on a basis of exchange. MARVELOUS ENDURANCE

OF BRITISH LIEUTENANT. Carried Hundreds of Miles Before Wound Was Dressed.

London, March 6-News has just reached here of two exciting scrim-mages by British troops and tribesmen in Africa. In the first of these, Major Lionel Joyce Conry of the Connaught Rangers, who was awarded the dis-tinguished service medal in South Africa in 1900, was killed in a fight with outlaws near Wadai Hadi, in the Sudan. Major Conry was in charge of a contingent of an Arab battalion of the Egyptian army. The leaders of the outlaws and other members of the band were killed and the remainder made prisoners. Besides Major Conry the British troops lost three mer killed and four wounded. In the second affair Lieutenant Jones was shot through both legs during an attack on a stockade by Abys Abyssinian Lieutenant Jones was wounded all his soldiers except three orderlies, fied. These men, at Jones' command, retook the stockade by assault.

Two of the soldiers, both natives, then bore the wounded officer on a stretcher 500 miles to his post. Blood poisoning meantime had set in, and Jones was conveyed to another post where a doctor was stationed. On their arrival, however, the doctor was absent and a journey to Nairobi was then started. On the way the stretch-er was charged by two rhinos, which the faithful orderlies killed. At Nyiri doctor and a nurse were found. The muscles of one of Jones' legs were so shrunk that the leg will al-ways be four inches shorter than the other and Jones will be a cripple for life. The doctors regard Jones' arrival at the hospital alive as miraculous. ODD FACTS ABOUT TITLES. Dom Pedro II, who lost the throne of Brazil in 1889, was the last monarch to offer titles for sale. In order to ob-tain funds for the erection of a hos-pital in Rio de Janeiro, the emperor announced that he would confer the title of "baron" on every subscriber of 100,000 milreis, and the title of "count" on every subgeriber of 250,000 milrels. Many proved willing to become ennobled on these terms, and sufficient money was forthcoming to endow the hospital as well as build it. Over the main entrance may still be seen the inscription suggested by Dom Pedro,

"Human Vanity to Human Misery."
Although French titles of nobility abolished at the time of the revolution by a decree that was revived in 1871 yet the ministry of justice issues certificates of nobility. Members of the French diplomatic service who use titles have to obtain one of these certificates and pay stiffly for the transaction. The fees in the case of a duke amount to $2,400, a marquis pays $2,000, a viscount $1,400, a baron $300 and a chevalier $260.

The Faithful Six.

French electors occasionally have ome home truths thrown at them by candidates who fall to secure enough votes. At the last general election M. Albert Normand, a chemist and drug-gist, who was a candidate for deputy from Montagne, received only six votes and issued an address thanking "the six electors who showed their confidence in me. They are the only sol vent citizens in the constituency, and I beg to assure them of my esteem. As for the others, I hereby give them notice that in future all attmepts to obtain credit at ml establishment will be relentlessly refused.
